

Imagination

I'm a little uncertain about this topic. For me, imagination involves a movement that isn't always helpful. But an interesting thing about being able to imagine and being immersed is that it shows a possibility of getting unstuck however sticky a situation may be. Such a situation may not always be as sticky as one would like to think. Downside is that this would be temporary. I think it's a difficult place to be when one is unable to bring imaginative/creative perspectives into own life.
