

I read a little on those paramitas and was interested in the metaphor of "crossing to the other shore" and rather than looking at definitions and ideas about specific "virtues", I asked myself about the general nature of it and - what /where it happens as a practice.

That seemed a continuation of my thoughts on Help... Giving and receiving Help occurs in relationship. Relationship is where we live, and is also the greatest Teacher. How can that be cultivated? What is the common daily life experience like, of making that intention and effort to "cross over"?

I was going to write up some thoughts that, but found some spam email that had a nice writeup already crafted. :) I entered it into my PlayAsBeing Guardian Contributions area:

http://wiki.playasbeing.org/Guardians%27\_Contributions/Calvino/Relationship\_As\_Practice